WINE SPECTATOR

Values Wish List: California's Central Coast

“The vast vineyard expanse of California has long been recognized as a fertile source of tasty and affordable wines. But as individual regions there emerge and evolve, it can be difficult to keep track of where the best values lie. Central Coast is a hot spot now, making myriad reds and whites worthy of attention.”

2008 Talbot Pinot Noir, Kali Hart

“This ripe red features pleasant aromas that lead to pure, delicate and generous plum, black cherry and wild berry fruit. Full-bodied, with a clean finish. Drink now through 2013.”

87 Points - Very Good
